

Susan LaPierre

2017 – 2023

VIENNA, VIRGINIA

Growing up in Wisconsin, Susan LaPierre's childhood and young adult years were spent hunting, fishing, and camping with her family. Today, she is passionate about protecting America's cherished national public lands, making them accessible to all Americans and celebrating the central role of nature and conservation in supporting healthy lives and healthy families.

Susan is an accomplished fundraiser with more than 30 years' experience working on behalf of charitable, political and mission-driven causes.

Twelve years ago, Susan launched the Women's Leadership Forum – a nationwide network of influential and philanthropic women united by a desire to protect the Second Amendment and our conservation, hunting, shooting, and outdoor traditions for future generations. Today, she continues to serve as the Forum's volunteer co-chair.

For the past 5 years, Susan served as President of the Board of Trustees for Youth For Tomorrow, a nonprofit residential treatment center and accredited high school for at-risk children founded by former Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs that today is a national model in therapeutic healing.

When time permits, you will find Susan hiking, fly fishing, hunting or enjoying nature.
